From Today's Readings

Luke 15: 1-32 Among the wonderful parables of losing and finding (sheep, coins), the story of the Prodigal Son tells of a young man who asks for his inheritance up front (unheard of in the ancient world) and leaves home for what he thinks will be a better life. Defeated by his own selfishness and sin, the prodigal humbly returns to a father anxiously awaiting his return. The obedient older son is sullen – why the party for someone so disrespectful? This is a parable about the nature of God’s merciful love and the transformative rewards of being faithful. Discuss/reflect: Describe both sons. Why was the older son resentful? What didn’t he understand about his own faithfulness? (See v.31 for the answer).

2 Cor. 6:1–7:1 St. Paul humbly shares the character of his ministry, which is a “mixed bag” of good and bad - glory and dishonor, sleepless nights and rejoicing, “having nothing but possessing everything.” He advises the faithful to strengthen themselves by avoiding unbelievers and the temptation of impure things. Discuss/reflect: Jesus calls us to a life of goodness – hard to achieve in this world! What do you feel when you hear that you are “the temple of the living God? (6:16) How might that change your behavior?

Isaiah 54:11-55:13 God will restore Jerusalem to a beauty and value that is described with images of precious jewels; He continues to promise His people all that they require to be satisfied. Discuss/reflect: Jesus continually stuns his listeners (and us) with His upside-down teachings: to live you must die (Mark 8:35), to gain you must give (Matthew 19:21), to rule you must serve (Luke 22:26). Light is shed on this in Isaiah 55:8: “For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways.” Think of all the ways God’s ways fly in the face of the world’s. Pray for guidance to follow Him.

Today is the Sunday of the Prodigal Son

The son in this parable is not happy with what he has, imagining the pleasures of a “distant country.” So he leaves his father and his home, descends into despair and then returns, chastened by the discovery that he had left behind what was best. The father reminds the resentful older brother -- as the Father reminds us -- that true happiness is in living with him daily and that all who return “home” are joyfully received. It is a cliché that we never appreciate the things we have – good health, meaningful work, loving friends and family – until we lose them. Jesus’ parables always transform such simple, well-understood realities into powerful metaphors for God’s love. Reflection: Many of us dream of some “distant country” just as the prodigal son imagined – a place where we could be or have something extraordinary. What is yours? What does this parable teach us about those places and those things?
